

Character Analysis

You will complete two of these for this assignment—one from the African American perspective and one from the white perspective. You need to consider the time period, what we have learned during our lessons about desegregation and then try to put yourself in that individual's shoes, even if you disagree with the individual. You're trying to show me that you understand the feelings these people had—not your own feelings.

Head that ...

wants to learn
and go to school.

Heart that...

doesn't know
why he can't go to school and
why people don't like him.

Hands that...

shake because
he is scared
and hold onto
his book bag.

Feet that ...

run away when
he is scared
and are tired
of walking to school.

Head that ... is full of knowledge
because it has learned a lot in white
schools.

Heart that... doesn't know
or like black people.
Wants to be separated because she thinks she is better.

Hands that...
Push over
busses and
smash windows.
Hold protest
signs.

Feet that ...
March and protest
against black people coming to her school.
