

Cotton Ginning.

THE subscriber will engage to gin, in a manner equal to picking by hand, any quantity of the green seed cotton, on the following terms, viz. for every five pounds delivered him in the seed he will return one pound of clean cotton fitted for market.

For the encouragement of cotton planters he will also mention, that ginning machines to clean the green seed cotton on the above terms will actually be erected in different parts of the country before the harvest of the ensuing crop.

PHINEAS MILLER.

Malberry Grove, near Savannah, March 1, 1794.